Comments from course responsible (IK8021):

While the satisfaction index has improved, it should be noted that the response rate is nominally lower this year compared to last. However, the feedback is consistent with my interactions with actively engaged students throughout the reading period. I am glad to hear that the students responded positively to the inclusion of regular office hours and that they are self-reporting that they have attained the intended learning outcomes. I have tried my best to maintain transparency and fairness throughout the course, and I consider the honest student feedback as a reflection of an open learning environment.

The feedback and commentary regarding suggested improvements to the course are overall fair. This year's students contributed actively to peer discussions during group presentations, and potential changes to the seminar formats can be considered to further emphasize group reflections and peer dialogue.

With respect to project placements: Instructors do try to our best to match students with available projects. Prior to course start, students were sent a survey and asked to rank their preferences to a list of project briefs. Additionally, students for the research placement course have always been encouraged to submit their own placement suggestions—though no students did for HT2024.
