Examinators kursanalys

Vilka styrkor har kursen?

Most students seem to agree that the course is interesting (especially the final project) and that it provides relevant knowledge, which is very important

Vilka svagheter har kursen?

The biggest weakness was the difficulty and the high pace of the course. In general, we agree that the course is challenging, especially for those students without previous programming experience. The overall passing rate is quite high, though (about 50% of the students have passed as of today, and an additional 25-30% are only missing a lab or two). I am also delighted with the quality of the final projects -- all this indicates to me that you are learning a lot in this course :)

We will try to brainstorm ideas about reducing the stress around the lab assignments. In a perfect world, we would make them all optional rather than mandatory -- however, we know very well that a lot of practice is needed to learn programming, and thus optional labs would not achieve the goals of the course. It is also crucial to learn each concept since all the future parts depend on earlier concepts, so if any key part is missed, it'll make future tasks impossible to solve.

Övriga kommentarer

The overall course evaluation has been much higher than last year, which is great. In the written comments, we can see many good suggestions for the next year, both in terms of things that worked well this time, and those that need improvement. One idea is to improve the connection between the lectures and the labs even further; there is still a gap between the theory in the former and the practical application in the latter. We will work on clarifying that "copy-paste" from lecture slides is not always going to work.

Overall, though, I want to repeat that after seeing the final projects, I am quite happy with the final outcome -- many of these apps are very impressive! Finally, even though many comments concerned the high workload in the course, we see that only half of you felt you needed to spend more time than expected on the course, which is promising.
